Over a century ago, Glacier Park Lodge was built by the Great Northern Railway.

Inspired by the 1905 Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition, the lodge's architecture seamlessly melded the great outdoors with indoor comfort, boasting a magnificent 48-foot high log colonnade in its bustling great hall. Nestled against the majestic Dancing Lady Mountain, the lodge featured Montana's first grass greens golf course and splendid garden, while paying homage to the Blackfeet nation's culture.

Today, guests still arrive by train to enjoy golfing, fireside relaxation, and exploration of Glacier National Park, embracing the lodge's blend of historic charm and contemporary hospitality amidst nature's splendor.
